

The Evolution, Cognition, and Culture

Bagel Hour

Presents

Eleanor Power

Santa Fe Institute

September 10, 2015

2:00-3:30 pm

Beach Hall, Rm 447A

Signals, Subtle and Dramatic: Religious Practice in Rural South India

Eleanor Power is currently an Omidyar Fellow at the Santa Fe Institute. She completed her PhD in anthropology at Stanford University, drawing on two years of fieldwork in Tamil Nadu, India, where she studied the religious life and social support systems in two neighboring villages. She has a BA from Brown University and a MSc from University College London.

Sponsored by the Department of Anthropology and the James Barnett Endowment for Humanistic Anthropology

For more information please contact Richard Sosis (richard.sosis@uconn.edu).