A Public Lecture

12:00 – 1:30 p.m.
Oak Hall – Room 236

Harvey E. Goldberg’s work focuses on the cultural history of Jews in North Africa, on religious and ethnic identities in Israel, and on the interfaces of anthropology and Jewish Studies. His translation from Hebrew of an indigenous account of Jews in Libya – The Book of Mordechai by Mordecai HaCohen – links historical and ethnographic perspectives. Goldberg has authored Cave Dwellers and Citrus Growers: a Jewish Community in Libya and Israel, Jewish Life in Muslim Libya: Rivals and Relatives, and Jewish Passages: Cycles of Jewish Life. Among his edited works are Sephardi and Middle Eastern Jewries and The Life of Judaism. Today’s talk is based on ethno-historical research, carried out together with Hagar Salamon, among former residents of Tunisia and Libya now living in Israel.
